

Use These 3 Secrets from Chess to Become a Grandmaster of Your Money

Tired of the same old "It's a new year" financial advice? Try this instead!

The opening of a chess game sets the stage, so open up with:

1. Controlling the center (The center of the board is where the game is played for a lot of time, so get it set up right with automated savings, retirement plans, budgeting, etc.)
2. Developing your fighting pieces (Get your money working in the stock market as early as you can so you benefit from compound interest and long-term investing. Don't wait until the end game to try to make huge returns because then the risk is too high. Make sure to speak with a financial advisor to make responsible investments BEFORE you invest.)
3. Castling (Protect your core asset: You. Consider life insurance, disability, and health care insurance. Buy the insurances you NEED, not the ones that a salesman pushes on you.)
