

How to Manage Your Investments When Your Main Income Source Could Collapse at Any Moment

- * Get serious about an emergency fund. Putting aside money for an emergency is a good idea, but for an emergency fund to be fully accessible, it needs to be in a liquid asset. Liquid assets, like money markets and CDs receive low interest. Learn more here: www.profileperspectives.com/your-emergency-fund-an-investment-or-an-insurance-policy/
- * Create an income stream from an investment like a bond portfolio, real estate fund, bank deposits, or high dividend stock funds... but be careful and get professional advice. Watch "Increase Your Retirement Income" here: www.profile-financial.com/videos/increase-retirement-income
- * Save bonuses, raises, and if possible, your spouse's second income. When you're in an unsteady job, make sure that you save whenever you can.
- * Avoid debt at all costs. If you lose your job, the debts you have outstanding will feel like a knife stabbing you every month. Debt has enough problems on its own, and it's exacerbated if you lose your main income source.
